

MARTIN'S WORK DOES NOT IMPRESS CRITICS

Boxing Writers Believe Soldier Has Good Future but That He Is Notripe for Title Go.

"Bob" Martin, champion heavy-weight boxer of the A. E. F. and allied forces in France during the war, may properly be classed as a professional championship prospect, but he has a long and strenuous journey before him to reach that point where he will be a factor against the heavy crown. Martin made his professional debut in Akron, Ohio, his home town, last month with Joe Bonds, of New York, as his opponent. The bout was scheduled to go 15 rounds, but Referee Matt Hinkel stopped it in the tenth round to save Bonds from further punishment.

If Martin displayed any unusual fighting ability in his inaugural, the critics expect about the ring faced to observe it. He punched Bonds through every minute of the battle and also proved to the fans he could accumulate some heavy bombardment on the chops, but his judgment of distance was terrible, and he was almost powerless to shake off the embraces of Bonds, who clinched at every opportunity.

It was the consensus of opinion that Martin will make good in the fight business, but he needs plucky work. He is a big lad and is well made. He has a good position, punches well for a novice and does not seem to have the slightest fear of a toe-to-toe mix.

Many of the critics, however, were disappointed with his purchasing power. From the first round he apparently had no trouble to find Bonds' chin, but despite the fact that he landed there dozens of times in the first round, he was unable to stop the New Yorker. Martin's best work was done when he slugged. His attempt at boxing weakened the power of his blows. In the sixth round Bonds attempted to slug with Martin and the soldier champ discarded science for good solid drives and put Bonds down for the count of four. With a year's activity against the lesser lights in the heavy class, Martin could reasonably be expected to show unusual class. He knows practically nothing of ring generalship, and until he acquires some of the finer points of the game, would be the softest kind of picking for Dempsey, Fulton, Meahan or any of the other so-called first flight millers.

Drake Beats Washington. Drake, who was a member of the Drake university upon the plans of Washington university in the Missouri valley conference football race here today, by defeating Washington 14 to 13. Drake outplayed its opponents and put up the strongest offensive and defensive game it has shown this season.

"Beauts" Zbyzsko, the Polish grappler, would like to wrestle for the championship, if he could find out who is champion.

Ike Dern, the clever Salt Lake City wrestler, is out to clean up the eastern grapplers and clinch the world's middleweight championship.

The said the White Sox were unable to put up their real game in the recent world's series. But to the man in the captive balloon it looked as if the Reds could beat any kind of an old game the Sox could play.

Looks good for the Reds next season, as Pat Moran is surely a repeater. The champs' first hit for 1,000 in the banquet league in Cincinnati and then duplicated the trick in his home town of Fitchburg.

Eugene Brosseau, Canada's crack middleweight boxer, is out with a challenge to box Mike O'Dowd, Mike Gibbons or anyone belonging to the select circle of mitt wielders on the American side.

The Princeton football team being soft for the Tiger scrubs may be only a training stunt after all. Scoring easily on the varsity outfit makes said outfit accustomed to being scored on.
